The University of Texas at San Antonio, Department of Economics
Tenure-Track Position in Economics at the rank of Assistant Professor

The University of Texas at San Antonio Department of Economics invites applicants for a tenure-track position at the rank of Assistant Professor. A Ph.D. in Economics (or a related area) is required by the start date in August 2021. Candidates expected to complete all requirements for the Ph.D. by August 2021 will be considered.

The position is open to applied econometrics candidates from micro or macro subject areas. Research and teaching interests in labor, industrial organization, public, or health economics are preferred. Candidates who match any of the university's initiatives for collaborative and interdisciplinary research in cross-cutting areas, including data analytics and machine learning, community health and public policy, or supply chains and cyber security, are preferred.

Candidates should demonstrate a strong potential for publishing in top field or general-interest journals. Candidates should demonstrate a strong potential for successful teaching, ideally evidenced by student feedback. Candidates should have good verbal and written communication skills, and the ability and desire to work collegially with faculty. Candidates should be able to teach a graduate course containing applied econometrics.

The successful candidate will be expected: to participate in departmental service activities, to pursue economics or cross-disciplinary research grants where feasible, and to develop a course in their research field at the undergraduate or graduate level. The successful candidate will be able to work with and be sensitive to the educational needs of a diverse urban population and support the University’s commitment to thrive as a Hispanic Serving Institution and a model for student success.
